This lady is Helen Harp, not Hart.

Thank you for the above correction!

The edit has been added under the “person” category.

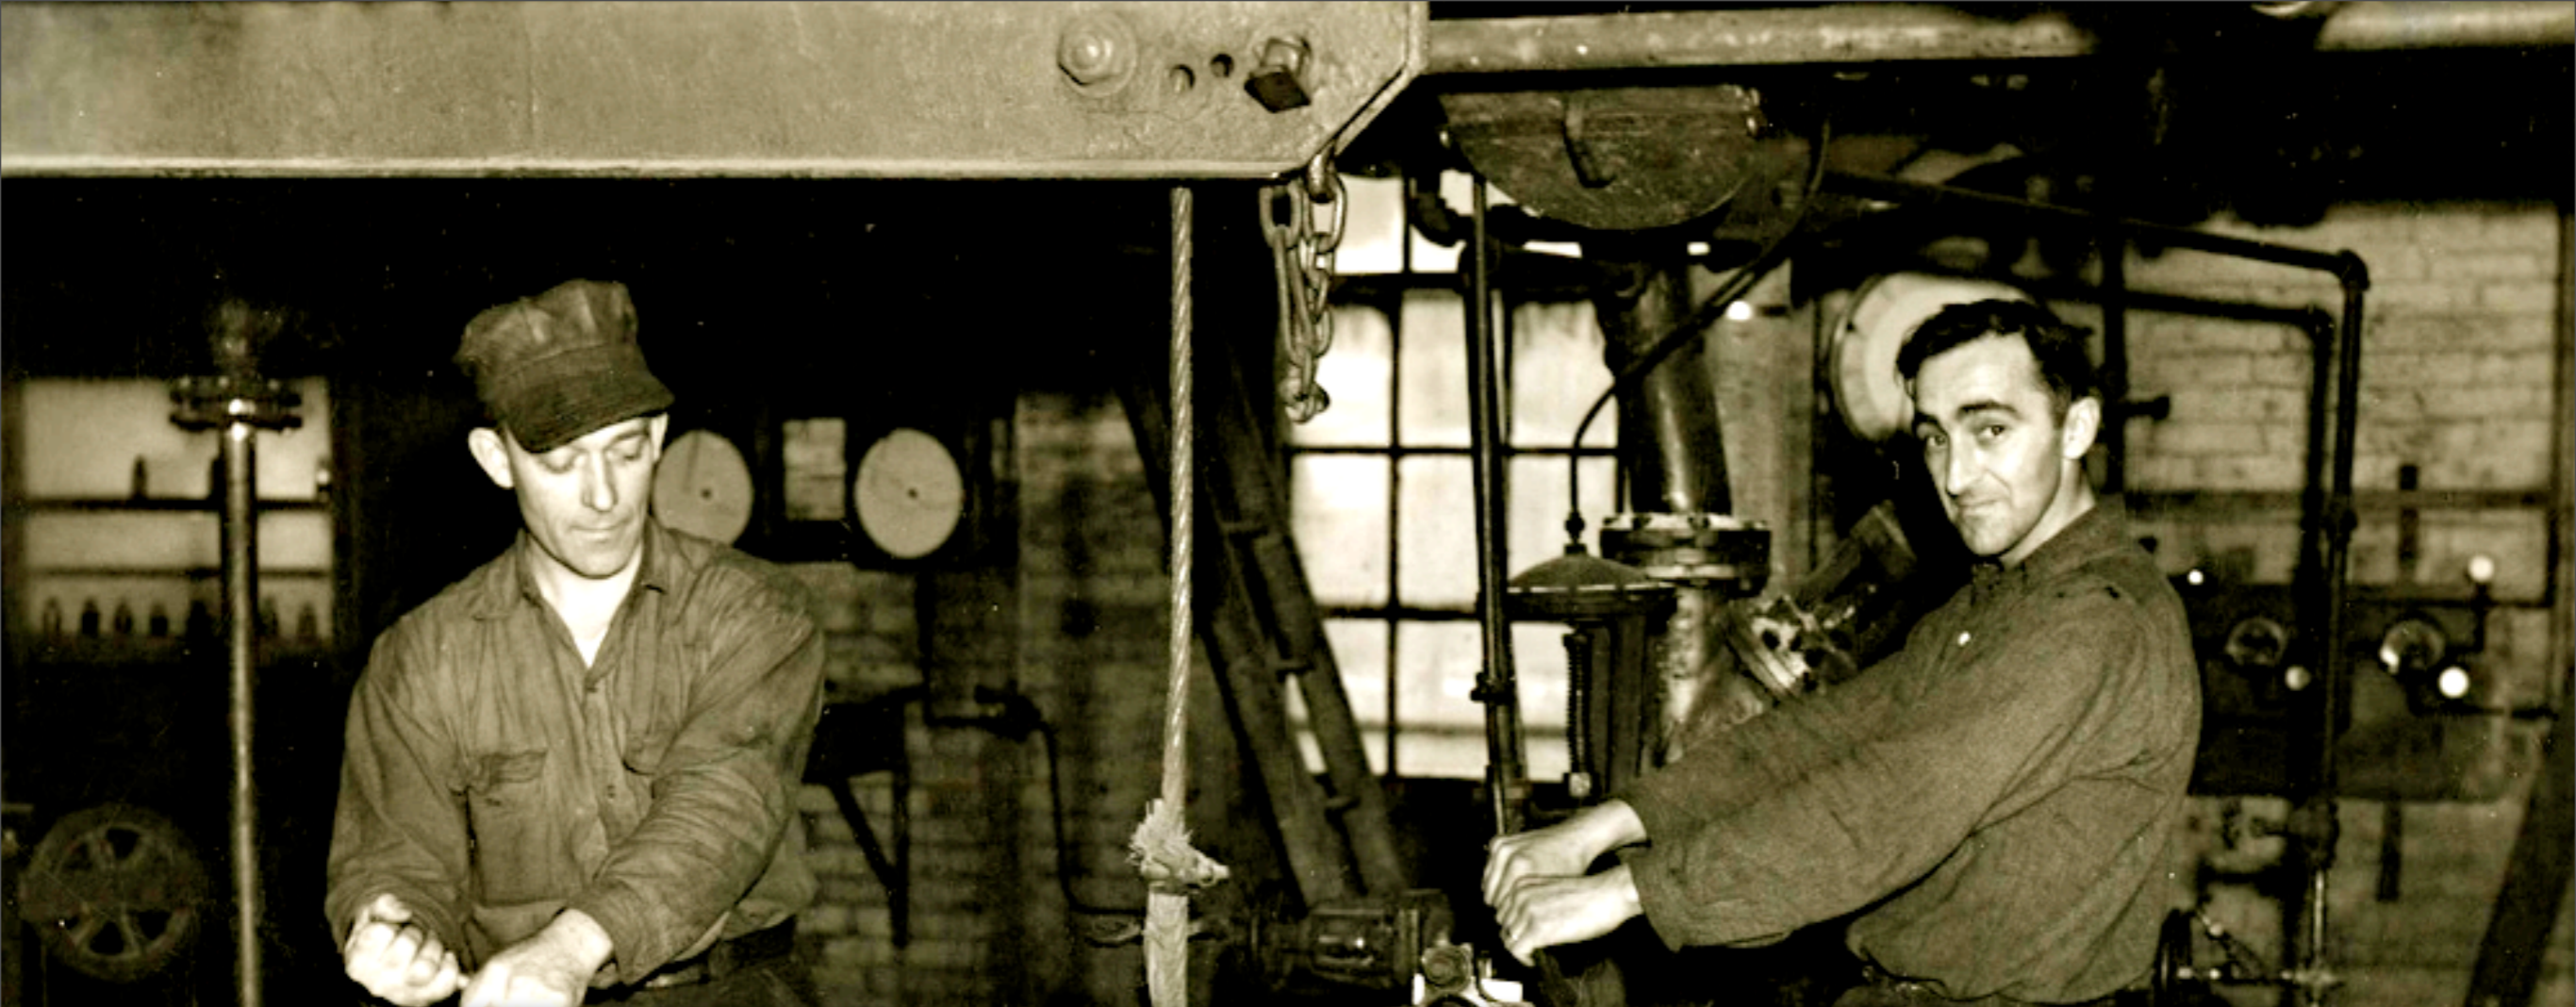

Ronald A. Couture // Apr 5, 2007 at 6:44 pm

This picture was taken at the Burgess first Digester House . We knew it as the Old Chip Loft back in our days. There was still one digester used for Black Liquor storage and that was #19. The Chip Loft was right above the Digesters, there was a gate that the operator opened and the chips would flow by gravity into the Digester. Same theory applied with the Blow Valves which would open directly into what we knew as the Blow Pits.

Fred Smith // Mar 29, 2007 at 1:21 pm

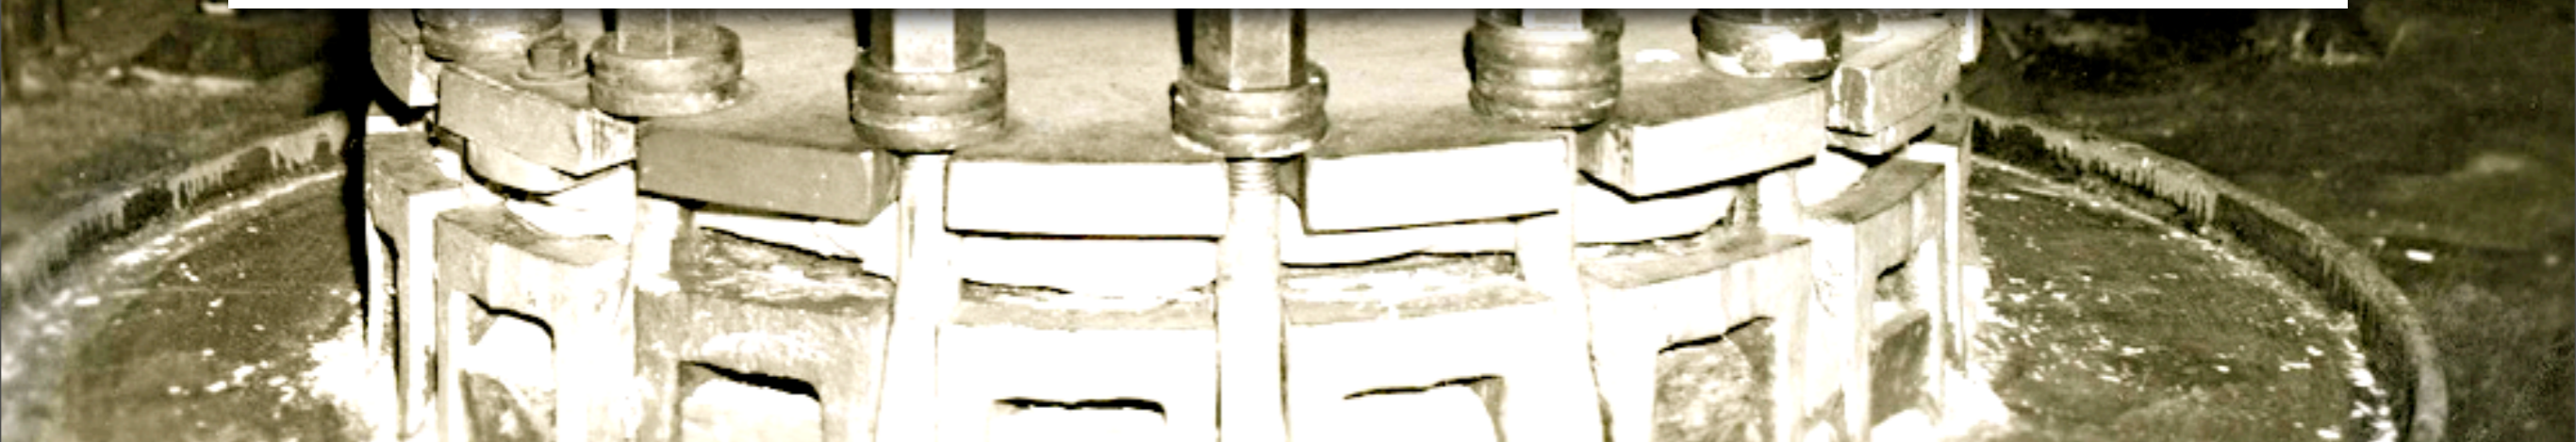

This photograph was taken at the Burgess Mill Digester House in January 1945. The man on the right is Roger Dignard (spelling of name may be incorrect).

Roger W Dignard // Jul 12, 2007 at 10:24 pm

Stumbled upon this photo. I am quite certain that the man on the right is my uncle; and the name is spelled correctly.

Description And Reviews

The beauty of the New England countryside, the joys of forming a new family, the adventure of renovating a nineteenth-century barn come together in Joe Monninger's evocative memoir of home and hearth. While building a fence, putting in a garage, building the house, and exploring the land, the author finds his family's new life rooted in New England traditions, learning the history of covered bridges and New England's witchy past.
